TWO MORE GOOD FARES

The Mackerel Fleet Are Still
With the Fish.

MANY NETTERS FITTING AWAY.

One Trip Each at Philadelphia and New York.

A special to the TIMES reports the arrival at Fulton market, New York, yesterday afternoon, of sch. Marguerite Haskine, Capt. Benjamin A. Spurling, with 100 barrels of fresh medium mackerel.

A special to the TIMES from Philadelphia this forenoon, reports the arrival here this morning of the sch. Annie M. Parker of Boston, Capt. John O'Brien with 175 barrels of fresh mackerel.

A special to the TIMES this noon states that the mackerel of sch. Annie M. Parker of Philadelphia average two pounds each and the trip is being sold by T. P. Larkin, the well known Dock street fish and commission merchant.

Sch. Florida, Capt. Procter, and sch. Freedom, Capt. Peter Willett, are fitting for mackerel netting.

Sch. Pluribustah is fitting for mackerel netting under command of Capt. Alonzo Parker.

Capt. Charles Doucette is fitting sch. Margie Smith for seining.

Capt. Jacobs' Steamer.

Capt. Sol Jacobs' steam fisherman will be a great sight all along shore next summer. The Journal believes that steamers in the deep-sea fisheries have come to stay, though it will be many a year before we see the last of our splendid fleet of clipper schooners. The first steam fishing craft were crude and clumsy experiments, ill-designed and extravagant consumers of fuel. Capt. Jacobs's vessel embodies the results of a century's progress in steam engineering and marine architecture.—Boston Journal.

"The Fish Ran Away with The Spoon."

A codfish that swallowed a silver spoon has been creating a sensation at Clinton. It is generally believed that the spoon was lost overboard from an ocean liner and caught on the fly by the cod. Mrs. John Clancy bought the codfish for last Friday's rations, and when she came to cut up the fish she found a good dessert spoon, none the worse for having been swallowed by the codfish.

STOCKED NEARLY $4800.

Sch. Hattie M. Graham
Landed 33,195 Mackerel.

FIRST NETTER AT NEW YORK

Sch. Lena and Maud There with 115 Barrels.

A special to the TIMES this morning reports the arrival at Fulton market, New York, of sch. Lena and Maud, Capt. Joseph E. Graham, with 115 barrels of large and medium mackerel.

Steamer F. S. Willard of Portland, was at New York yesterday afternoon with 50 fresh mackerel, the first netting fare of the season. The fish were taken off the New Jersey coast.

Sch. Hattie M. Graham, Capt. John S. Seavey, counted out 32,195 fish as the result of her recent big mackerel fare landed at New York, Monday.

On this fare a stock of about $4789 was made. This is a record breaker, being the largest stock ever made on a southern mackerel trip. Capt. Seavey has made a fine start and his many friends are looking to him for a big season's work.

Schs. Nourmahal and Lottie G. Merchant were spoken Monday steering north by steamer Alba in latitude 36 25, longitude 74 55.

Sch. Cenennial was at Hyannis bound south, yesterday.

Capt. Solomon Jacobs expects to be able to go on his maiden trip in the steamer Alice M. Jacobs this afternoon or evening.

Sch. Blanche F. Irving is fitting for mackerel netting.

Gasoline auxiliary sch. Victor was at Norfolk, Va., Tuesday for gasoline.

Work on the new schooner Veda M. McKown is being pushed and Capt. George McKown hopes to be able to sail on her maiden trip Saturday. She is a handsome craft and much admired by the many skippers who have looked her over.

Fresh mackerel are bringing 17 cents apiece at New York today.

Herring Scarce at Placentia Bay.

At Placentia Bay, up to the present time, there have been no herring in the bottom of the bay, and prospects for baiting are poor. All the fishermen in that vicinity are rushing their preparations for the summer's fishery and most of them will be ready to leave for the Cape grounds by the last of this month.

Good Stock.

Sch. Hiram Lowell, Capt. John F. Vautier, stocked $1300.95 on her fare of fresh mackerel landed at New York on Saturday.
